16 ARRESTED IN GAMBLING RAID

Lewis Calls Mine Owner 'Dirty Liar'

Fact-Finders Open Coal Strike Probe

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8—John L. Lewis accused the chief spokesman for the mine owners today of telling "a dirty, deliberate, infamous lie." Lewis made the charge at the opening of the presidential fact-finding hearing on the soft coal strike.

The United Mine Workers president interrupted the hearing to hurl his charge at George H. Love of Pittsburgh despite a warning from the board that it would not permit "recriminations" from either side.

Love was reciting details of a coal peace conference last October in the office of Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching when the growling Lewis rose slowly, his feet and made his accusation.

The Pittsburgh coal operator quoted Lewis as telling Ching the operators have the mines but they can't operate them without men and "I hold the men in the palm of my hand."

Lewis interrupted: "That's a dirty, deliberate, infamous lie. I say it to you, George Love, right now."

"I said I represented the men and you have the mines. 'You're a liar by the clock.'"

BOARD CHAIRMAN David L. Cole of Patterson, N. J., interrupted the union chief to say: "Mr. Lewis, let's not have these interruptions."

Lewis replied: "Why not, why not?"

The UMW president sat down, however, as Love resumed his testimony.

The three man fact-finding board adopted a unique procedure today and asked management and union representatives to "debate" the facts of the eight-month-old coal contract battle instead of following the usual practice of submitting long, formal statements.

Cole and his colleagues, Economists W. Willard Wirtz and John Dunlop, fired questions at Love and Lewis to determine the reasons behind last week's breakdown in coal wage negotiations.

The fact-finding panel opened hearings on the coal strike today, but a federal court decision may be the key to unlock the long contract deadlock between Lewis and the operators.

The three-man board of inquiry summoned UMW representatives and industry negotiators to testify before it today. The board plans to close its study tomorrow and will try to submit its report to the White House this weekend.

President Truman must await the panel's findings before he can direct Attorney General McGrath to seek a court injunction to return the 400,000 striking soft coal miners to work for 80 days.

Jury Frees Mercy Killer

STAMFORD, Conn., Feb. 8—Tearful, happy Carol Ann Paignt returned home a free woman today to pick up the torn strands of normal life.

The blonde, 21-year-old college senior broke down and wept last night when a jury of parents, after deliberating four hours and 53 minutes, acquitted her of the mercy slaying of her cancer-stricken father on grounds of temporary insanity.

'No Parking' Sign Erection Is Ordered

Parking violations in Circleville Tuesday night provided meat for discussion by the city councilmen.

The subject was broached by Councilman George Crites, who said that twice last month he noticed vehicles parked in yellow safety zones.

He made a motion, which council passed, that no parking signs be erected in these zones. Council instructed Safety Director C. O. Leist to take necessary steps to have vehicles parked in safety zones tagged and the drivers fined.

Councilman E. L. Montgomery suggested that Leist be instructed to issue orders to police to keep alleys open in the city.

He added that he had been informed by "a prominent bar-rister" that many of the stop signs in Circleville are illegal. He said he had been informed that letters on such signs were

Anti-Police Chief Measure 'Tabled' By City Council

Instead, Solons To Seek Bids On New Cruiser, Motorcycle

Circleville city council Tuesday not only applied full brakes to passage of a bill to reduce Police Chief William McCrady's salary, but also ordered:

(1) Bids advertised for a new police cruiser.

(2) Bids advertised for a three-wheel motorcycle.

A motion to table an ordinance reducing the chief's pay was passed five to two after the bill came up for third reading during Tuesday night's legislative session.

A vote on passage of the ordinance would have been automatic following third reading. The legislators apparently preferred not to take that chance.

This was the second time in two months that council backed water on passage of legislation. During their last session of 1949 a bill to raise their own salaries was tabled.

Voting against the motion to table the McCrady salary bill were Councilmen George Crites and Ray Anderson.

DURING LAST meeting of council the solons appointed a special committee to meet with Chief McCrady and his legal counsel, Emmitt Crist, in an attempt to work out some compromise agreement.

Two offers were made the chief. He could accept a job as "chief of detectives," or he could take an increase in pay—just long enough to make it legal—then resign on a substantial pension.

Results of that meeting were reported Tuesday by Councilman Walden Reichelderfer, member of the special committee. McCrady said no to both offers. He would "get out only if put out."

The tabled bill would have reduced the chief's salary from $211.75 per month to $150. According to Attorney Crist, passage of the bill would have brought immediate action in the form of a law suit against the city.

The motion to advertise for bids for a new police cruiser was made by Councilman Anderson, while Councilman Joe Brink moved to advertise for bids for a three-wheel motorcycle.

Appropos of the cruiser, Councilman Montgomery remarked that council should stipulate that it be "properly marked at time of delivery."

The three-wheel motorcycle would be used to facilitate policing of parking meters in Circleville.

The Latin word for blank," explains Johnson. "Sugar pills."

Declaring that each customer is different, and that each has minor differences in personality from day to day, Johnson says:

"One thing I've learned from working in a small town is never to look down on the man in overalls. In a farming community like Circleville a man's clothing is no indication of his education or wealth."

"In the large city it's different. There you have some class distinction, and clothing is the badge."

Turning again to prescriptions, Johnson points out that many laymen believe doctors write in Latin, to keep the patient from knowing the whole story.

Not so, says Johnson. Medical and chemical phrases and abbreviations known to both doctors and pharmacists are used.

"It's a fixed code," he says. "And the idea is not to confuse the patient, but to make the meaning clear to all doctors and pharmacists. The system is known and used throughout Europe and America."

While popular writeups of drug discoveries invariably bring inquiries for the new stuff, most requests are in the veterinary field, Johnson says.

"We have many requests from farmers for new animal drugs,"

C-54 STILL MISSING

12 Men In Search Plane Feared Lost In Yukon

WHITEHORSE, Feb. 8—An American search plane with 12 men aboard apparently was lost today in the icy wastes of the Yukon in the hunt for a missing U. S. C-54 and its 44 passengers.

The search plane, a C-47, left Whitehorse headquarters yesterday morning and reported only once by radio. Other planes were sent up to scan a 900 square mile area but failed to sight the lost craft.

Persistent SOS radio signals were heard here after the C-47 was reported overdue. The source of the distress calls was not determined.

The C-54 transport vanished Jan. 26 on a flight from Alaska to El Paso, Tex. No trace of it has been found.

The missing search plane was an American craft manned by personnel from both the U. S. Airforce and the Royal Canadian Airforce.

Commodore Martin Costello, search coordinator, said that the sub-zero weather threatened to limit the hunt for both planes.

THE C-47 WAS scheduled to search the area south of Aishik, about one hundred miles north of Whitehorse. Snow was reported falling in that region with the temperature hitting 22 below zero.

The crews engaged in the international hunt were hopeful that the missing search plane might be found with its occupants safe. Last week another plane of the same type crashed near Whitehorse and the crew of six escaped with only minor injuries.

The search for the C-54 Sky-

master was scheduled to continue on another front south of the Yukon as soon as the weather clears. This phase of the search was started yesterday in British Columbia when faint but repeated SOS calls were heard.

They were heard by Walter (Pud) Hall, proprietor of a West Main street cafe. He is accused of promotion of the gambling game, according to Magistrate Oscar Root who handled the preliminary hearing.

The pudgy cafeman was released on $500 bond produced by his sister, Mrs. Ethel Fortner of 165 West Main street.

Second on the lawmen's list was Hall's nephew, Dwight Hall, who was released on a bond of $100. Squire Root said the younger Hall was accused with "operation" of the game.

Accused of plain gambling and released on bonds of $25 each were 12 men from Circleville, one from Greenfield and one from Washington C. H.

County Law Team Hits Local Joint

City Cops Unaware Of Crack-Down

In a lightning thrust, Pickaway County authorities raided an alleged gambling joint in downtown Circleville shortly after midnight Tuesday and arrested 16 persons.

Led by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Prosecuting Attorney Guy Cline, a nine-man raiding team swept into the place located at 137½ West Main street.

The raiding party confiscated more than $200 in checks and cash, a large poker table, playing cards, three slot machines and a well-marked copy of a Cincinnati horse racing form.

Both Sheriff Radcliff and Prosecutor Cline followed following their well-timed and smoothly-running raid this type of thing has got to stop in Pickaway County," Sheriff Radcliff added.

"We county officials have our hands full taking care of our duties in the county, let alone in the city, but we have known gambling existed in Circleville and are putting a stop to it."

Circleville city police department officials were not aware of the raid in their own bailiwick until they saw the 16 defendants being paraded into the county jail.

ALL OF THE 16 persons arrested were released on cash bond during the wee hours of Wednesday morning.

They were heard by Walter (Pud) Hall, proprietor of a West Main street cafe. He is accused of promotion of the gambling game, according to Magistrate Oscar Root who handled the preliminary hearing.

Sen. Jenner, (R) Ind., called for Senate acceptance of the judiciary committee's amendment to tighten the screening of displaced persons entering United States.

DECLARING that America's doors are wide open to spies, Jenner declared that "we can at least close one of them." He added:

"If Russia wants to get a spy into the United States, the record of DP screening in Europe shows that the DP program has been offering a simple, easy way."

The FBI chief reportedly told the appropriations group in a closed-door session that the Fuchs case is linked, through the Communist scientists' "contacts," with the Canadian spy ring exposed in 1946.

Ross (right) is shown as he announced to Washington reporters that President Truman had signed an executive order invoking the Taft-Hartley law in the soft coal strike. C-54 STILL MISSING

12 Men In Search Plane Feared Lost In Yukon

WHITEHORSE, Feb. 8—An American search plane with 12 men aboard apparently was lost today in the icy wastes of the Yukon in the hunt for a missing U. S. C-54 and its 44 passengers.

The search plane, a C-47, left Whitehorse headquarters yesterday morning and reported only once by radio. Other planes were sent up to scan a 900 square mile area but failed to sight the lost craft.

Persistent SOS radio signals were heard here after the C-47 was reported overdue. The source of the distress calls was not determined.

The C-54 transport vanished Jan. 26 on a flight from Alaska to El Paso, Tex. No trace of it has been found.

The missing search plane was an American craft manned by personnel from both the U. S. Airforce and the Royal Canadian Airforce.

Commodore Martin Costello, search coordinator, said that the sub-zero weather threatened to limit the hunt for both planes.

The C-47 was scheduled to search the area south of Aishihik, about one hundred miles north of Whitehorse. Snow was reported falling in that region with the temperature hitting 22 below zero.

The crews engaged in the international hunt were hopeful that the missing search plane might be found with its occupants safe. Last week another plane of the same type crashed landed near Whitehorse and the crew of six escaped with only minor injuries.

The search for the C-54 Sky-

master was scheduled to continue on another front south of the Yukon as soon as the weather clears. This phase of the search was started yesterday in British Columbia when faint but repeated SOS calls were heard.

The city fathers gazed and were duly impressed. They were reminded of other things. The chairs, for instance, that sustained them in their fortnightly dignity.

Old things, those chairs. Dangerous, too. Ask Councilman E. L. Montgomery who made his debut by being thrown by one of the things.

"I move," said Councilman George Crites, "that the safety director be authorized to buy new ones."

"Some nice, soft, cushiony ones," suggested his colleague, Ray Anderson.

"And we need some new linoleum for out there," continued Crites, pointing to the floor beyond the railing that separates the law artisans from the citizenry.

"How about two new hat racks?" put in Councilman Boyd Horn. "That's what we need. Two new ones."

The city fathers murmured agreement to all this. And the matter was left up to Safety Director C. O. Leist.

County Law Team Hits Local Joint

City Cops Unaware Of Crack-Down

In a lightning thrust, Pickaway County authorities raided an alleged gambling joint in downtown Circleville shortly after midnight Tuesday and arrested 16 persons.

Led by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Prosecuting Attorney Guy Cline, a nine-man raiding team swept into the place located at 137½ West Main street.

The raiding party confiscated more than $200 in checks and cash, a large poker table, playing cards, three slot machines and a well-marked copy of a Cincinnati horse racing form.

Both Sheriff Radcliff and Prosecutor Cline decried following their well-timed and smoothly-running raid that "this type of thing has got to stop in Pickaway County." Sheriff Radcliff added:

"We county officials have our hands full taking care of our duties in the county, let alone in the city, but we have known gambling existed in Circleville and are putting a stop to it."

Circleville city police department officials were not aware of the raid in their own bailiwick until they saw the 16 defendants being paraded into the county jail.

ALL OF THE 16 persons arrested were released on cash bond during the wee hours of Wednesday morning.

They were headed by Walter (Pud) Hall, proprietor of a West Main street cafe. He is accused of promotion of the gambling game, according to Magistrate Oscar Root who handled the preliminary hearing.

The pudgy cafe man was released on $500 bond produced by his sister, Mrs. Ethel Fortner of 165 West Main street.

Second on the lawmen's list was Hall's nephew, Dwight Hall, who was released on a bond of $100. Squire Root said the younger Hall was accused with "operation" of the game.

Accused of plain gambling and released on bonds of $25 each were 12 men from Circleville, one from Greenfield and one from Washington C. H.

School Chiefs Keep Close Tab On Sick List

Circleville educators Wednesday carefully were watching the increasing "absent" lists in Circleville high school.

The board of education was told Tuesday night that eight of the teachers—including the superintendent and principal—are absent from duty because of illness, while a total of 110 pupils also are absent.

Board Clerk Virgil Cress told the education panel Tuesday that both Superintendent Frank Fischer and Principal J. Wray Henry have been absent because of illness.

In addition, teachers Mrs. Joan Buck, Mrs. Truman Eberle, Mrs. Annette Will, Mrs. Alice Brown, Mrs. Audrey Batterson, Mrs. Ruth Thompson and Mrs. Opal Ullman have joined the absentees, while Mrs. George Young, who has been substituting for one of the ill

Old Recipe Or Modern Prescription, Druggist Has Job

By LESLIE SHELLEY
Herald Staff Writer

He stood with a work-garbled hand tucked under the bib of his blue overalls, solemnly watching the druggist read the scrap of paper.

"She's an old one," he nodded. "Mite hard to read mebbe, but a whiz after she's figured. Knocks the rheumatiz like a bear in a berry bush."

The pharmacist looked up from the grimy, wallet-creased paper. "Be ready in an hour," he offered, not too hopefully.

The customer grinned. "Take longer'n that mebbe. Last feller, he took three hours. One f'ore that took all day. Want it for the ol' woman. She got took with the misery in her left arm, and she says to me, John, she says—"

"An hour," promised the man on the healthy side of the counter. He watched the customer amble out of the store, glanced again at the paper. He sighed.

The incident is not too far-fetched. According to Karl Johnson, local druggist, customers frequently present old recipes, handed down from generation to generation, to pharmacists.

Sometimes the formulas call for ingredients that are unmixable, sometimes out-and-out dangerous. But always the customer is positive he has a sure-fire cure for one or more human ills.

A pharmacist can learn a lot about human nature by watching and listening across the prescription counter. Often he is called on to act as counselor.

"We learn not to ponder them. If their questions call for a negative answer, an answer we know will be distasteful, they get it anyway."

Occasionally a pharmacist is handed a prescription calling for a "placebo."

The Latin word for blank," explains Johnson. "Sugar pills."

Declaring that each customer is different, and that each has minor differences in personality from day to day, Johnson says:

"One thing I've learned from working in a small town is never to look down on the man in overalls. In a farming community like Circleville a man's clothing is no indication of his education or wealth."

"The fair board has been having a tough enough time to get along," smoothed Councilman Ray Anderson. "If they can make any money out of the machines, let 'em have it. I'm willing to go along with just our amusement taxes."

But Montgomery wants to find out what the laws are. "The fairgrounds are part of the city now, boys," he reminded his colleagues.

"We have legalized gambling at one end of town. We might as well have it at the other," remarked Crites.

George, C. E. Schaffer, Robert Walton, Robert Wilkes, Leonard Rutter, William Fowler, Earl Speakman, Robert Hildenbrand, Roy Walisa, Henry Walisa, Leslie Brown and Melvin Thompson.

The other two were Gerald Cassidy of Greenfield and Donald Tompkins of Washington C. H.

ALL OF THE 12 men accused of gambling are scheduled to appear for hearing before Squire Root at 10 a. m. Friday.

Dwight Hall's hearing is booked for 2 p. m. Friday.

Walter Hall has asked that his hearing be held at 10 a. m. Feb. 17.

Sheriff Radcliff and Prosecutor Cline were assisted in their raid by Radcliff's two regular deputies, Carl K. Radcliff and Walter Richards, and five special deputies—Russell Parish of Circleville, Route 4, James Hooks of Williamsport, and Clyde Cromley, Howard Eit and Russell Hedges, all of the Ashville community.

The alleged gambling spot is located in a front room at 137 1/2 West Main street. This also is the address of Congo Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men.

The Red Men's lodge room is in the back and is separated from the gaming room by a small kitchen. Entrance to the kitchen can be gained through swinging doors from either room.

Officials said, however, that no one was in the Red Men's lodge room at the time of the raid. The kitchen was open and operating, but Guy Rush, lodge cook, was not implicated by county officials. They said their information showed he had no connection with the front gambling center.

COUNTY OFFICIALS said their information showed that the front room is under lease to Walter Hall and that the back room is leased to the lodge.

Entrance to the front room is gained through two locked doors. Deputy Radcliff said, however, that entrance was made "quickly and easily."

Bolting into the room, deputies immediately surrounded the poker table and confiscated the cash on the table and the cards before many of the alleged players were aware that a raid was on.

One reported later that "the law seemed to drop right out of the ceiling."

Their surrender was quiet and without protest, officials reported.

One of the men arrested said that at the time of the raid the poker game underway was a two dollar limit affair. He added:

"The law showed up too soon. The game gets rough—no limit—later in the night and some of the big boys show up then."

He would not identify "the big boys."

Officials said Wednesday that groundwork for the crack-down on gambling has been laid for some time. Sheriff Radcliff and Prosecutor Cline would not deny that a private detective had been "working the city" for several days.

They did not identify the man. The sheriff said:

"Naturally such a man goes by several names and comes from several cities."

It is assumed this private detective secured the information leading to the Wednesday raid.

Officials would not comment on whether the detective secured information on any other gambling activities in the city. It is not an uncommon practice, however, for such an investigator to round up data for presentation to county grand juries.

Pickaway County's next grand jury is scheduled to convene next week.

Drunken Driver Is Fined $150

Charles L. Zimmerman, 39, of 145 West High street was fined $150 and costs Wednesday in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller for drunken driving.

Zimmerman was arrested at 10:25 p. m. Tuesday when he turned his auto into the path of another car at Court and High streets.

Officer Mack Wise said Zimmerman had been travelling north on Court street when he attempted to make a left turn onto High street. His auto was struck by a south-bound car operated by John C. Dell, 31, of Columbus. Dell suffered a minor head injury in the mishap.

Local School Appropriations Hiked $97,809

Circleville board of education Tuesday released its appropriation schedule for 1950.

Total appropriation by the education panel is listed at $339,558.15 for the ensuing year, with teachers' salaries ranking highest among anticipated expenditures, followed by the unanticipated emergencies fund.

This year's appropriation tops last year's mark by a total of $97,809.37. The 1949 appropriation was listed at $241,748.78.

One of the largest differences between the two years is the teachers' salary appropriation, which has increased by $19,685, while the unanticipated emergency fund almost has doubled last year's figure.

Teachers' salaries, including salary of Principal J. W. Henry, were appropriated at $160,980 for the year.

In addition, $10,820 was appropriated for salaries of Superintendent Frank Fischer, Board Clerk Virgil Cress and Superintendent's Secretary Mary Neff, while $12,820 was appropriated for janitors' pay and $1,800 for salary of the attendance officer.

THE BOARD SET aside $78,599.67 in the unanticipated emergencies fund, a catch-all appropriation which may be tapped to round out other appropriations should they fall short.

Next high appropriation was $26,100 scheduled for the bond retirement fund, while $15,100 was set aside for purchase of supplies.

The board appropriated $14,188.48 for fixed charges and contributions, $4,400 for equipment replacements, $4,000 for materials for maintenance and $9,025 for contract and open order service.

2 N&W Trains Discontinued

A directive from Norfolk and Western Railway Tuesday listed somewhat confusing schedule changes for two passenger trains passing through Circleville.

According to A. V. Osborn, clarification on the directive has been received. The two trains will be discontinued, he said. They are the south bound passenger arriving at 8:50 a. m. and the northbound at 9:55. Previous information said they would operate on a tri-weekly basis.

Out-Of-Towners Pay Fines Here

Two out-of-town traffic violators were fined Tuesday in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller.

William D. Commeyans, 25, of Columbus, was fined $10 and costs for driving an auto without an operator's license, while John W. Clark, 35, of Dayton, was fined $25 and costs for reckless operation.

Both men were arrested on Route 62 by State Highway Patrolman Cpl. J. L. Binkley.

PATTERSON

New Engineer Added By Local GE Company

Milton E. Patterson, 24-year-old native of Memphis, Tenn., has become a permanent member of the Circleville Lamp Works engineering staff, according to announcement of Ed Grigg, manager of plant.

The new engineer will work under the direction of Richard Boerner, chief engineer. During the last three months, he has been here on a temporary assignment in connection with the General Electric test engineering course whereby selected graduate engineers are given three-month assignments in different plants until at least a year is completed after which they and the company try to find the best position possible in line with their interest and ability. Both Grigg and Boerner are graduates of this same General Electric test engineering course.

Patterson is a graduate of Louisiana State University, obtaining his bachelor of science degree in 1948. He joined the company in September of that year. Patterson's college career was interrupted during the war for a two-year enlistment in the Army Air Force, in which he served from 1944-1946. The major part of Patterson's Air Force career was spent in Panama, where he attained the rank of sergeant.

Patterson and his wife, also a graduate of Louisiana State University, and five-month-old son will reside in Circleville at 128 East Mill Street.

"I expect it will be open Thursday," Osborn said.

One accident has been reported in connection with the traffic rerouting.

Officer Elmer Merriman said that a truck operated by Ray Hudson, 47, of Charleston, W. Va., crashed into the south-east draw gate at about 5:55 a. m. Wednesday. Merriman added that little damage was done and that no arrest was made.

Women's Group Hears Jaycee Hoover Report

Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce gave another address Tuesday afternoon in its rapid-fire campaign to boost the Hoover Commission and its findings.

The organization to hear the address Tuesday was Child Conservation League which met in the home of Mrs. N. L. Cochran with Henry Reid Jr., local Jaycee president as speaker.

General theme of Reid's talk was that "the financial situation of our government is becoming more difficult day by day." He added:

"A federal expenditure of over $43 billion with a deficit of over $5 billion has been announced for the present fiscal year with the possibility that it may be greater for next year. This could mean that we may be turning loose two Frankensteins in the land by the names of 'higher taxes' and 'inflation.'"

"THE HOOVER Commission is interested in combating these two Frankensteins. It is the Jaycee aim to educate Pickaway County through a town meeting with Dr. Harver Walker of Ohio State university as instructor, this Sunday in Circleville high school auditorium at 3 p. m."

Reid stated that "whenever we think we can make ends meet someone moves the ends. The Jaycees feel that whatever we can accomplish through the town meeting will help confine the two Frankensteins."

Educators Move To Improve Local Buildings

Circleville board of education Tuesday cleaned up a list of necessary additions to the various buildings in the city system.

Board Clerk Virgil Cress was instructed to purchase lavatories for Franklin and High Street schools, along with a drinking fountain for the High Street school, in addition to seeking estimates for installation of sinks in the high school home economics department and fitting wiring into the metal shop.

Cress told the board he already has received several unofficial bids for the home economics installations, most of which were for the built-in-cabinet type sinks.

The supplies committee of the board is to consider official estimates and make recommendations prior to the next board meeting.

William Wyatt, industrial arts instructor, also requested that the board install a new 220-volt electric line into the metal works shop at the rear of the high school building.

Wyatt said the installation would permit him to set new machinery into operation this semester, gear now stored in readiness for the proposed new industrial arts building.

In addition, President Carl Leist requested that a survey of the lighting conditions of the schools in the Circleville system be made to find whether the present lighting is adequate.

Board members J. O. Eagleston, J. I. Smith and Board Clerk Cress were appointed as members to the Parent-Teacher Association planning committee during the meeting. The committee will work with the teachers and parents in order to explain problems of the board and seek the best possible solutions.

required by law to be six inches high.

CITY SOLICITOR George Gerhardt said he would check on the matter and report at next council meeting.

Local Attorney Emmitt Crist, speaking from the gallery, said he recently represented a client whose car had been struck by another which had driven through a stop sign.

He said that in court the defense attorney produced a photograph which showed by comparison of a ruler with the letters on the sign that they were not the correct size.

He added that a similar case was thrown out of court in Columbus recently. The defendant immediately sued the city, he said, "and that case is still pending."

Montgomery made a motion to have Leist conduct a survey to find out how many legal and illegal stop signs there are in Circleville. The motion was carried.

Shaking hands was believed to have originated from the custom of baring the weapon hands as a symbol of peace.

County Law Team Hits Local Joint

The other two were Gerald Cassidy of Greenfield and Donald Tompkins of Washington C. H.

ALL OF THE 12 men accused of gambling are scheduled to appear for hearing before Squire Root at 10 a. m. Friday.

Dwight Hall's hearing is booked for 2 p. m. Friday.

Walter Hall has asked that his hearing be held at 10 a. m. Feb. 17.

Sheriff Radcliff and Prosecutor Cline were assisted in their raid by Radcliff's two regular deputies, Carl K. Radcliff and Walter Richards, and five special deputies—Russell Parish of Circleville Route 4, James Hooks of Williamsport, and Clyde Gremley, Howard Eit and Russell Hedges, all of the Ashville community.

The alleged gambling spot is located in a front room at 137 1/2 West Main street. This also is the address of Congo Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men.

The Red Men's lodge room is in the back and is separated from the gaming room by a small kitchen. Entrance to the kitchen can be gained through swinging doors from either room.

Officials said, however, that no one was in the Red Men's lodge room at the time of the raid. The kitchen was open and operating, but Guy Rush, lodge cook, was not implicated by county officials. They said their information showed he had no connection with the front gambling center.

COUNTY OFFICIALS said their information showed that the front room is under lease to Walter Hall and that the back room is leased to the lodge.

Entrance to the front room is gained through two locked doors. Deputy Radcliff said, however, that entrance was made "quickly and easily."

Bolting into the room, deputies immediately surrounded the poker table and confiscated the cash on the table and the cards before many of the alleged players were aware that a raid was on.

One reported later that "the law seemed to drop right out of the ceiling."

Their surrender was quiet and without protest, officials reported.

One of the men arrested said that at the time of the raid the poker game underway was a two dollar limit affair. He added:

"The law showed up too soon. The game gets rough—no limit—later in the night and some of the big boys show up then."

He would not identify "the big boys."

Officials said Wednesday that groundwork for the crack-down on gambling has been laid for some time. Sheriff Radcliff and Prosecutor Cline would not deny that a private detective had been "working the city" for several days.

They did not identify the man. The sheriff said:

"Naturally such a man goes by several names and comes from several cities."

It is assumed this private detective secured the information leading to the Wednesday raid.

Officials would not comment on whether the detective secured information on any other gambling activities in the city. It is not an uncommon practice, however, for such an investigator to round up data for presentation to county grand juries.

Pickaway County's next grand jury is scheduled to convene next week.

Drunken Driver Is Fined $150

Charles L. Zimmerman, 39, of 145 West High street was fined $150 and costs Wednesday in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller for drunken driving.

Zimmerman was arrested at 10:25 p. m. Tuesday when he turned his auto into the path of another car at Court and High streets.

Officer Mack Wise said Zimmerman had been travelling north on Court street when he attempted to make a left turn onto High street. His auto was struck by a south-bound car operated by John C. Dell, 31, of Columbus. Dell suffered a minor head injury in the mishap.

Local School Appropriations Hiked $97,809

Circleville board of education Tuesday released its appropriation schedule for 1950.

Total appropriation by the education panel is listed at $339,558.15 for the ensuing year, with teachers' salaries ranking highest among anticipated expenditures, followed by the unanticipated emergencies fund.

This year's appropriation tops last year's mark by a total of $97,809.37. The 1949 appropriation was listed at $241,748.78.

One of the largest differences between the two years is the teachers' salary appropriation, which has increased by $19,685, while the unanticipated emergency fund almost has doubled last year's figure.

Teachers' salaries, including salary of Principal J. Wray Henry, were appropriated at $160,980 for the year.

In addition, $10,820 was appropriated for salaries of Superintendent Frank Fischer, Board Clerk Virgil Cress and Superintendent's Secretary Mary June Neff, while $12,820 was appropriated for janitors' pay and $1,800 for salary of the attendance officer.

THE BOARD SET aside $78,599.67 in the unanticipated emergencies fund, a catch-all appropriation which may be tapped to round out other appropriations should they fall short.

Next high appropriation was $26,100 scheduled for the bond retirement fund, while $15,100 was set aside for purchase of supplies.

The board appropriated $14,188.48 for fixed charges and contributions, $4,400 for equipment replacements, $4,000 for materials for maintenance and $9,025 for contract and open order service.

2 N&W Trains Discontinued

A directive from Norfolk and Western Railway Tuesday listed somewhat confusing schedule changes for two passenger trains passing through Circleville.

According to A. V. Osborn, clarification on the directive has been received. The two trains will be discontinued, he said. They are the south bound passenger arriving at 8:50 a. m. and the northbound at 9:55. Previous information said they would operate on a tri-weekly basis.

Out-Of-Towners Pay Fines Here

Two out-of-town traffic violators were fined Tuesday in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller.

William D. Commens, 25, of Columbus, was fined $10 and costs for driving an auto without an operator's license, while John W. Clark, 35, of Dayton, was fined $25 and costs for reckless operation.

Both men were arrested on Route 62 by State Highway Patrolman Cpl. J. L. Binkley.

New Engineer Added By Local GE Company

Milton E. Patterson, 24-year-old native of Memphis, Tenn., has become a permanent member of the Circleville Lamp Works engineering staff, according to announcement of Ed Grigg, manager of plant.

The new engineer will work under the direction of Richard Boerner, chief engineer. During the last three months, he has been here on a temporary assignment in connection with the General Electric test engineering course whereby selected graduate engineers are given three-month assignments in different plants until at least a year is completed after which they and the company try to find the best position possible in line with their interest and ability. Both Grigg and Boerner are graduates of this same General Electric test engineering course.

Patterson is a graduate of Louisiana State University, obtaining his bachelor of science degree in 1948. He joined the company in September of that year. Patterson's college career was interrupted during the war for a two-year enlistment in the Army Air Force, in which he served from 1944-1946. The major part of Patterson's Air Force career was spent in Panama, where he attained the rank of sergeant.

Patterson and his wife, also a graduate of Louisiana State University, and five-month-old son will reside in Circleville at 128 East Mill Street.

N&W Railway Rushing Grade Crossing Fixup

Traffic is expected to be resumed Thursday or Friday over the South Court street Norfolk and Western Railway crossing.

A. V. Osborn, N and W freight agent, said the crossing has been blocked so that the grade may be repaired. He said that a carload of ballast was spread over the crossing Tuesday, and that the workmen were awaiting a shipment of blacktop from Greenfield to complete the job.

"I expect it will be open Thursday," Osborn said.

One accident has been reported in connection with the traffic rerouting.

Officer Elmer Merriman said that a truck operated by Ray Hudson, 47, of Charleston, W. Va., crashed into the south-east draw gate at about 5:55 a. m. Wednesday. Merriman added that little damage was done and that no arrest was made.

Women's Group Hears Jaycee Hoover Report

Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce gave another address Tuesday afternoon in its rapid-fire campaign to boost the Hoover Commission and its findings.

The organization to hear the address Tuesday was Child Conservation League which met in the home of Mrs. N. L. Cochran with Henry Reid Jr., local jaycee president as speaker.

General theme of Reid's talk was that "the financial situation of our government is becoming more difficult day by day." He added:

"A federal expenditure of over $43 billion with a deficit of over $5 billion has been announced for the present fiscal year with the possibility that it may be greater for next year. This could mean that we may be turning loose two Frankensteins in the land by the names of 'higher taxes' and 'inflation.'"

"THE HOOVER Commission is interested in combating these two Frankensteins. It is the Jaycee aim to educate Pickaway County through a town meeting with Dr. Harver Walker of Ohio State university as instructor, this Sunday in Circleville high school auditorium at 3 p. m."

Reid stated that "whenever we think we can make ends meet someone moves the ends. The Jaycees feel that whatever we can accomplish through the town meeting will help confine the two Frankensteins."

Educators Move To Improve Local Buildings

Circleville board of education Tuesday cleaned up a list of necessary additions to the various buildings in the city system.

Board Clerk Virgil Cress was instructed to purchase lavatories for Franklin and High Street schools, along with a drinking fountain for the High Street school, in addition to seeking estimates for installation of sinks in the high school home economics department and fitting wiring into the metal shop.

Cress told the board he already has received several unofficial bids for the home economics installations, most of which were for the built-in cabinet type sinks.

The supplies committee of the board is to consider official estimates and make recommendations prior to the next board meeting.

William Wyatt, industrial arts instructor, also requested that the board install a new 220-volt electric line into the metal works shop at the rear of the high school building.

Wyatt said the installation would permit him to set new machinery into operation this semester, gear now stored in readiness for the proposed new industrial arts building.

IN ADDITION, President Carl Leist requested that a survey of the lighting conditions of the schools in the Circleville system be made to find whether the present lighting is adequate.

Board members J. O. Eagleston, J. I. Smith and Board Clerk Cress were appointed as members to the Parent-Teacher Association planning committee during the meeting. The committee will work with the teachers and parents in order to explain problems of the board and seek the best possible solutions.

'No Parking' Sign Erection Is Ordered

CITY SOLICITOR George Gerhardt said he would check on the matter and report at next council meeting.

Local Attorney Emmitt Crist, speaking from the gallery, said he recently represented a client whose car had been struck by another which had driven through a stop sign.

He said that in court the defense attorney produced a photograph which showed by comparison of a ruler with the letters on the sign that they were not the correct size.

He added that a similar case was thrown out of court in Columbus recently. The defendant immediately sued the city, he said, "and that case is still pending."

Montgomery made a motion to have Leist conduct a survey to find out how many legal and illegal stop signs there are in Circleville. The motion was carried.

Shaking hands was believed to have originated from the custom of baring the weapon hand as a symbol of peace.

Councilman Crites Forgets Rules, Gets Fouled Up In Procedure

City Councilman George Crites learned about parliamentary procedure Tuesday night—and found it tricky stuff. It happened during the regular meeting of Circleville city fathers.

Two resolutions were up for adoption, one for a two and one-half ton pickup truck for the water department, the other for a one-half ton truck for the sewage department. Both were discussed.

The resolution for sewage department truck was read first. Councilman Crites asked if both could be passed at once. He was told they could not. One at a time was the rule. Crites is a veteran in city council, but apparently had forgotten Robert's rules of order.

Crites made a motion for passage of the ordinance authorizing bids for the water department truck.

He was told it was not an ordinance, but a resolution.

He moved for adoption of the resolution for the water department truck.

HE WAS TOLD IT had not been read yet. Crites sat down, then bounced up. This time he got it right. The resolution was adopted unanimously.

But enough apparently was enough. Crites let Councilman Ray Anderson make the motion to adopt the resolution for the water department truck. It, too, was passed unanimously.

In his role as manager of the sewage department Ervin Leist said sewage plant employees had volunteered to build a garage for the truck if the city would furnish materials.

As manager of the water department, Leist explained that the department was handicapped in its present possession of only one truck. The volume of work required two trucks, he said.

The city fathers also adopted a third resolution authorizing the city treasurer to deposit funds in four local banks, providing each bank agrees to act as depository.

City Solicitor George Gerhardt explained that the resolution is a routine matter undertaken at the beginning of each new term of council. It is required by bonding companies, he said.

Health Panel To Parley On New Milk Code

A meeting of Circleville city council health committee has been called for next Monday night.

Purpose of the meeting, Councilman E. L. Montgomery told his fellow solons Tuesday evening, is to discuss pending legislation for a city milk code.

"We intend to go over it from A to Izzard," said Montgomery. He invited any councilmen who wished to attend the committee meeting to "come along."

A resolution putting the milk code into effect was recently adopted by Circleville board of health. An appropriation of funds, however, must be made by council before the code becomes fully effective.

Montgomery termed the bill "the most important piece of legislation to come before council in years."

It's estimated that three million purchase orders are issued each year by government agencies. One half of these orders average less than $10 in value. Thousands of items purchased cost less than the paper work needed to buy them. The affair will be discussed at the Jaycee Town Meeting in the high school auditorium Sunday afternoon.

Synchronizing Traffic Lights Set By Solons

An ordinance authorizing a contract for synchronizing traffic lights in Circleville was passed by city council Tuesday night.

The bill gives the nod to Safety Director C. O. Leist to enter into a contract with L. S. Lytle, local electrician, for connecting five traffic lights on Pickaway street and one at Scioto and Mound streets to the main control in City Hall. This will permit synchronization of all up-town traffic lights.

Cost of the work was set at $958.20. The sum includes labor and materials, but not light bulbs. The work is to be performed in accordance with a bid submitted Jan. 16 by Lytle.

New 2-Ton Truck Is Considered

A motion authorizing Service Director John Neuding to advertise for bids for a new two-ton truck was passed by Circleville city council Tuesday.

The solons explained that an ordinance on the matter would be drawn for next meeting.

Synchronizing Traffic Lights Set By Solons

An ordinance authorizing a contract for synchronizing traffic lights in Circleville was passed by city council Tuesday night.

The bill gives the nod to Safety Director C. O. Leist to enter into a contract with L. S. Lytle, local electrician, for connecting five traffic lights on Pickaway street and one at Scioto and Mound streets to the main control in City Hall. This will permit synchronization of all up-town traffic lights.

Cost of the work was set at $958.20. The sum includes labor and materials, but not light bulbs. The work is to be performed in accordance with a bid submitted Jan. 16 by Lytle.

New 2-Ton Truck Is Considered

A motion authorizing Service Director John Neuding to advertise for bids for a new two-ton truck was passed by Circleville city council Tuesday.

The solons explained that an ordinance on the matter would be drawn for next meeting.

CHINA AND RUSSIA

THE LONG talks in Moscow between Soviet officials and high leaders of the Chinese Communists have led to much speculation as to demands Russia is said to be making on China. These range from outright territorial concessions to grain supplies and labor forces. A question which constantly arises, but finds no answer, is what great boon is to come, in exchange, from Russia to China.

What is it that the Chinese Communists want—really want—from Moscow? The real Chinese needs are largely the same as Russia's needs. The wants of these two nations do not complement each other but on the contrary overlap and compete with each other. China has its own need of grains, of the labor of its people, and the development of its untapped resources. The experience of Russian satellites in Europe has been that Russia does not give material goods and the benefits of development, but takes them away; does not enrich, but impoverishes. How, then, can the people's crusade of the Chinese Communists fare if China is to become another Russian satellite?

This is a question of absorbing interest. An answer is not likely to be found in official announcements on the Moscow talks, nor to be found at all for many years. It may be the key to the future of all Asia.

FAMILY DOCTOR

THE recent award of the American Medical Association's gold medal to Dr. Andy Hall of Mt. Vernon, Ill., has brought to light a career fairly typical of an old American institution, the family doctor.

Starting his medical career in a modest way, Dr. Hall had the usual struggle to get on his feet, and fought against the common obstacles of lack of equipment and poor transportation. As perhaps the most useful citizen of his community, his career is noteworthy chiefly because it is typical of the lives of countless general practitioners whose unselfish devotion to their calling has made them valuable members of society and has raised the general level of health to a high point.

The close personal touch of the old-style family physician gives him an intimate knowledge of his patients' physical and mental make-up. The psychological lift given the sick by the sight of the familiar, benevolent figure of their doctor has been more important than medicine to many a patient. The nation needs more family doctors.

No matter what happens to the United States, some one is sure to say, "It is all the fault of the schools."

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Few issues before the American people are as important as Point Four. It is not being sufficiently discussed and few quite grasp the dangers of it, involving us not only in unbelievable costs but in unbearable responsibilities.

In this connection, I want to call your attention to a pamphlet "Illusions of Point Four," written by Henry Hazlitt, one of the soundest economists of this country, who writes a column in Newsweek magazine. It is published by "The Foundation for Economic Education," Irvington-on-Hudson, New York. If every reader of this newspaper would read Hazlitt's pamphlet and then write his congressman what he thinks of loading his children and grandchildren with the cost of an idea originally proposed by Earl Browder in his book, "Teheran," and then advocated by Henry Wallace—Point Four would die.

Frank C. Laubach of the Committee of World Literacy and Christian Literature, Foreign Missions Conference of North America, writes me in favor of Point Four:

"I suppose your vigorous opposition to giving more money to foreign countries arises from the fact that so many billions were misused or stolen in the past. If this is your reason you are right. People will not use money right if they do not know how to use it. But Point Four is precisely for the purpose of teaching people how to use money wisely, to make sure they do it.

"The reason I believe this is very important is because very rapidly we are losing most of the world to the Communists. If you are not a Communist you will be worried about that. I do not mean to intimate that you are a Communist, but you happen to be on their side in trying to sabotage Point Four. It is the one weapon they cannot successfully oppose. Have you noticed how they attack it?"

"I have worked in 61 countries in Asia and Africa in my special field of writing text books for illiterates, and have had a perfect opportunity to understand why Asia and Africa are falling to Communism. It is because these people are hungry, miserable, sick and enormously determined to come up. The Communists stir up this dissatisfaction, and then promise to relieve it after the government is overthrown. They are capturing the unhappy areas of the world with false propaganda."

Laubach is wrong. No country on record has gone Communist for his reasons. Each country was conquered by Russian imperialism. Upon each country was imposed a police state controlled by the Russians. In each case, the people had no voice and the Communists were a small segment of the population. Without Russian support and in some instances, without the oppressive presence of Russian troops, the Communist regime could not have taken over.

SYNOPSIS

Mark Dustin is on the point of buying his beautiful wife, Celia, a star ruby bracelet which Walter Voorland, the dealer, claims is the finest in the world, when Mike Shayne, a detective, questions its authenticity. Unperturbed, Voorland convinces the bracelet's rare qualities, and Mike, reassured, lets it go. Celia's wrist, he says, it when told it may be insured at full purchase price, one hundred eighty thousand dollars, plus tax! Fear grips Celia, who had been a poor girl when the fabulous bauble is delivered to their luxurious home suite. Her premonition of evil is fulfilled later that night when their car is held up by bandits who brutally beat Mark and snatch the fortune in treasure from Celia's wrist. The police enter the case, declaring it a well-planned crime.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

SHAYNE had a curious feeling deep inside him that the episode with his secretary was more than a game. He had a fair idea of the way Lucy felt, and he respected her for it. Tonight for the first time since Phyllis' death it didn't seem wrong to have a woman in his apartment. He had tried to run away from Lucy but it hadn't worked; and she had tried to run away from him by quitting her job and closing the New Orleans office in a fit of rage, but that hadn't worked either. He had persuaded her, by long distance telephone, to come to Miami for a vacation, and now they were here together.

Shayne took a sip of cognac and reflected upon the situation. A feeling of contentment and inertia possessed him. He had no cases on hand because he hadn't yet decided whether to re-establish himself in Miami or return to New Orleans. He was thinking of calling to Lucy and telling her to hurry up and finish the dishes and come in to sit beside him when the phone rang. It was an old-fashioned wall phone, and its ringing had disrupted his plans so often in the past that he decided not to answer it. He slumped deeper in his chair, his angular face relaxed, his eyes half-closed, meditatively sipping Mond and consigning all telephones to the lower regions.

He wasn't conscious of Lucy's presence in the room until the phone stopped ringing. He looked up to see her putting the receiver to her ear. She said, crisply, "Michael Shayne's office."

She listened for a moment, turning her head sideways to look at Shayne. He looked back at her and tried not to scowl. She was still playing the game and getting such a kick out of it he hadn't the heart to scold her.

"Yes," she said, "he's right here." She held out the receiver.

"He says it's Chief Will Gentry."

Shayne growled, got up and lounged across the room, took the receiver from her and said, "Hello, Will."

"Did I interrupt something important?" Gentry's voice betrayed a lively and friendly interest in the feminine voice that had answered the telephone.

"Oh no," Shayne assured him. "That was just my maiden aunt from Peoria. You're heard me speak of Aunt Minnie."

"Oh," Chief Gentry hesitated a moment, then added, "Yeh, Rourke was telling me a couple of days ago about that pretty secretary of yours who just blew in from New Orleans."

"Tim probably has her out tonight," Shayne said cheerfully. "What's on your mind, Will?"

"What have you been doing all evening?" asked Gentry cautiously.

"Eating dinner right here. Aunt Minnie's a good cook. She can do things you never guessed with a dozen eggs, tomato ketchup and a couple of bottles of beer."

"Keep the recipe to yourself," growled Gentry. "I just finished dinner and it isn't setting too well as it is. Sure you've been in all evening, Mike?"

"You can ask Aunt Minnie. I'll call her to the phone and she'll tell you..."

"That's okay," Gentry said hastily. "Then you haven't been on the beach lifting a couple of hundred grand in rubies?"

"Rubies?" Shayne scowled at the wall. "What's up?"

"Some bird got beaten up and robbed of a bracelet about an hour ago. Painter just called up and he thinks you engineered the deal."

"A ruby bracelet? Wait a minute, Will. Is his name... Lucy?"

he called, "what was the name of that cowherd we met in Voorland's place buying a ruby bracelet last Monday?"

"Dustin?" Lucy appeared in the kitchen doorway with a plate and dishcloth in her hands.

"I thought," said Gentry over the wire, "you said her name was Aunt Minnie."

"Dustin," Shayne growled. "Mark Dustin. Is that the bird?"

"So you do know about it," said Gentry gravely. "Painter figures you're the only one who knew about the bracelet and that Mrs. Dustin planned to wear it for the first time tonight."

"So he puts the finger on me for snatching it?"

"You know Peter Painter," Gentry said. "Even if he doesn't actually think you pulled the job, you'll do for a suspect until a better one comes along."

"What does he want with me?"

"I think he'd appreciate it if you'd return the bracelet. I think you could make a deal with him."

Use of the Taft-Hartley Act by Mr. Truman should not be held against him. He has been asking for months for a law not nearly as effective.

But that old Congress seems to have tired of both the Wagner Act and the Lewis act.

When Helen Hayes was appearing in the role of Queen Victoria, she received hundreds of letters from fans who claimed to have met the Queen in person. Some of their reminiscences were more fantastically unbelievable than others. One lady, for instance, claimed to have been strolling with Victoria through the gardens of Buckingham when she came upon her oldest son, aged nine, lambasting a younger playmate. "What's the big idea?" demanded Victoria—in more regal language of course.

"I just wanted to show him I'm the Prince of Wales," explained the future Edward VII. Victoria yanked him across her knees (that's the lady's story!) and gave him a fanning, pointing out grimly, "I guess I'd better show you I'm Queen of England."

NEW YORK—For years, in defiance of logic and for no obvious reason at all, I have had the feeling that Pennsylvania station, which is one of this city's two big depots, has a great deal more authenticity and much more the appearance of a railroad station than Grand Central Terminal, which is its uptown twin.

This is the kind of thing about which anyone whose mind is not warped doesn't think twice. There are items of far greater import to be dealt with; there are budgets to be balanced, cosmos to be straightened out. But I think about it, and there, I guess, you are.

There is a coldness and gloominess in Penn station that is a part of this authenticity; it is the kind of station which, when you enter it, gives you the feeling that you are about to board the Blue Train or the Istanbul Express—even though you may be progressing only to South Tenth, N. J.

It does not have the genuine steam-cloud-and-whistle splendor of, say, Paris' Gare St. Lazare or Gare du Nord, but it looks and acts like a railroad station. Perhaps it is because it seems hoary with age, in sharp contrast to the spit-and-polish appearance of Grand Central.

Anyway—my instincts have not played me false. Penn Station remains a railroad station. Grand Central, on the other hand, has become a strange and frightening thing, in recent weeks.

SOME ONE HIGH UP in the scheme of things at Grand Central evidently paused between the 13th and 14th holes at his country club one late summer afternoon and said, "You know, Joe, what we need at the terminal is a little something to brighten it up, make it more livable—some music, or something like that. Let's see, I lie four here and shooting five..."

The upshot has been that now Grand Central walls all day long with syrupy music and clatters all day long with commercial announcements. A loud-speaker system, surely the devil's most malicious invention, has been installed.

As you trot wearily for the 5:13 to Tuckahoe, you are depressed by the noise of a Strauss waltz fighting for its head over the customary babble of train-station noises, or irritated beyond words by the sinister voice of some lost soul telling you what kind of razor blade to use.

I doubt if the high-up-in-the-scheme person foresaw the effect all this would have on the populace of New York. On the air and in the papers and magazines, New Yorkers are being exceptionally bitter about it all.

The New Yorker, for instance, devoted one of its editorials, to use the term loosely, to blasting the idea, and other writers and columnists have taken up the cry. I am one. I think it is dreadful.

ONE OF THE GREAT AND FEW PLEASURES of listening to the radio is that you can shut it off at will. I often like to muse happily on all the unanswered questions put to me by radio announcers that now are wandering sadly around in purgatory, unable to find peace, like The Scoundrel, because there is no one to mourn for them.

"Would you like to know how you can save $14.75?" the announcer will snap at me, clacking his store teeth imperiously. Snap! And there is the question, floating around in space, looking for an answer. Not from me.

The devil with it. Let it float. It is true I would like to know how to save $14.75, but not at the expense of my integrity.

In the midst of the furore, and it is a furore, the fur-lined Mr. Lucius Beebe, king of the after-shave endorsers and the aging hero of the Yale campus, has come up with an entirely irrelevant complaint. Lucius has been describing Grand Central bitterly as "the world's most incompetently designed terminal for arrival or departure by taxi."

"It is, in a word, not a continental terminal but a commuters' station," says Lucius Lucius, who always seems to be getting on a train for Tucson or Timbuctu.

M. Beebe weeps, too, for the "idiotic fixed chairs" now paid to porters in Grand Central. "A million or so travelers a day who would ordinarily be good for two bits or four for the porter carry their own luggage rather than be told what to pay the railroad," he meditates.

Well, all in all, this is a rough time of things for Grand Central Terminal, and that is just about what you will get when you come here for that semi-annual visit. Violins will play boogie-woogie versions of Rachmaninoff's Second, for piano, and unctuous voices will advise you to change your underwear twice daily and make sure it is a certain brand. A rough, rough time.

SHAYNE had a curious feeling deep inside him that the episode with his secretary was more than a game. He had a fair idea of the way Lucy felt, and he respected her for it. Tonight for the first time since Phyllis' death it didn't seem wrong to have a woman in his apartment. He had tried to run away from Lucy but it hadn't worked; and she had tried to run away from him by quitting her job and closing the New Orleans office in a fit of rage, but that hadn't worked either. He had persuaded her, by long distance telephone, to come to Miami for a vacation, and now they were here together.

Shayne took a sip of cognac and reflected upon the situation. A feeling of contentment and inertia possessed him. He had no cases on hand because he hadn't yet decided whether to re-establish himself in Miami or return to New Orleans. He was thinking of calling to Lucy and telling her to hurry up and finish the dishes and come in to sit beside him when the phone rang. It was an old-fashioned wall phone, and its ringing had disrupted his plans so often in the past that he decided not to answer it. He slumped deeper in his chair, his angular face relaxed, his eyes half-closed, meditatively sipping Monnet and consigning all telephones to the lower regions.

He wasn't conscious of Lucy's presence in the room until the phone stopped ringing. He looked up to see her putting the receiver to her ear. She said, crisply, "Michael Shayne's office." She listened for a moment, turning her head sideways to look at Shayne. He looked back at her and tried not to scowl. She was still playing the game and getting such a kick out of it he hadn't the heart to scold her.

"Yes," she said, "he's right here." She held out the receiver. "He says it's Chief Will Gentry."

Shayne growled, got up and lounged across the room, took the receiver from her and said, "Hello, Will."

"Did I interrupt something important?" Gentry's voice betrayed a lively and friendly interest in the feminine voice that had answered the telephone.

"Oh no," Shayne assured him. "That was just my maiden aunt from Peoria. You're heard me speak of Aunt Minnie."

"Oh." Chief Gentry hesitated a moment, then added, "Zah. Wurke was telling me a couple of days ago about that pretty secretary of yours who just blew in from New Orleans."

"Tim probably has her out tonight," Shayne said cheerfully. "What's on your mind, Will?"

"What have you been doing all evening?" asked Gentry cautiously.

"Eating dinner right here. Aunt Minnie's a good cook. She can do things you never guess with a dozen eggs, tomato ketchup and a couple of bottles of beer."

"Keep the recipe to yourself," groaned Gentry. "I just finished dinner and it isn't setting too well as it is. Sure you've been in all evening, Mike?"

"You can ask Aunt Minnie. I'll call her to the phone and she'll tell you..."

"That's okay," Gentry said hastily. "Then you haven't been on the Beach lifting a couple of hundred grand in rubies?"

"Rubies?" Shayne scowled at the wall. "What's up?"

"Some bird got beaten up and robbed of a bracelet about an hour ago. Painter just called up and he thinks you engineered the deal."

"A ruby bracelet? Wait a minute, Will. Is his name...? Lucy," he called, "what was the name of that cowherd we met in Voodland's place buying a ruby bracelet last Monday?"

"Dustin?" Lucy appeared in the kitchen doorway with a plate and dishcloth in her hands.

"I thought," said Gentry over the wire, "you said her name was Aunt Minnie."

"Dustin," Shayne growled. "Mark Dustin. Is that the bird?"

"So you do know about it," said Gentry gravely. "Painter figures you're the only one who knew about the bracelet and that Mrs. Dustin planned to wear it for the first time tonight."

"So he puts the finger on me for snatching it?"

"You know Peter Painter," Gentry said. "Even if he doesn't actually think you pulled the job, you'll do for a suspect until a better one comes along."

"What does he want with me?"

"I think he'd appreciate it if you'd return the bracelet. I think you could make a deal with him."

(To Be Continued)

If you played nice."

Shayne said, "Nuts."

"Sure it's nuts," Gentry agreed pleasantly, "but you'd better go over to the Sunlux and let Painter shake you down."

"Let him come over here if he wants to ask me fool questions."

"Wait a minute, Mike. He's ready to swear out a warrant for you if you don't lope over there pronto."

"So what?"

"I told him you were always glad to co-operate and I didn't believe that would be necessary," Gentry chuckled and added, "Is Aunt Minnie afraid to stay alone at night? Tim Rourke is hanging around the pressroom and I'll get hold of him if you like and..."

"Leave Tim out of this," said Shayne shortly. "I'll go over and tell the heel I gave up snatching rocks last week. The Sunlux?"

"Mark Dustin's suite. Is there a bracelet worth a hundred and eighty grand, Mike?"

"That's what Walter Voodland charged the sucker for it. It looked like junk to me, but if Earl Randolph okayed a policy on it, I could be wrong."

Gentry said, "Give my regards to Aunt Minnie," and hung up.

Shayne replaced the receiver and walked back to his chair, rubbing his angular chin thoughtfully. He poured a couple of ounces of cognac in his glass and held it up to the light.

"Lucy came in from the kitchen. 'What was it about the ruby bracelet, Michael?'"

"It's been snatched."

"Stolen? Already?"

"About an hour ago," Shayne scowled and let an ounce of cognac trickle down his throat.

"This must be the first time she's worn it," Lucy exclaimed. "Remember that day they were buying it? Mr. Dustin wanted it delivered by Friday for his wife to wear to a concert."

Shayne nodded. "And this is Friday."

"So they want you to recover it for them," said Lucy happily. "That's nice. You always feel better when you're working. And there should be a big reward. Goodness! A hundred and eighty thousand dollars!"

"It isn't quite as simple as that. Painter thinks I stole it."

"Painter?"

"Peter Painter," Shayne told her. "On the Beach. You've heard me speak of him often enough."

"Oh yes. But how on earth could he get such a crazy idea, Michael?"

"It isn't difficult... not for Painter," Shayne said morosely. (To Be Continued)

When Helen Hayes was appearing in the role of Queen Victoria, she received hundreds of letters from fans who claimed to have met the Queen in person. Some of their reminiscences were more fantastically unbelievable than others. One lady, for instance, claimed to have been strolling with Victoria through the gardens of Buckingham when she came upon her oldest son, aged nine, lambasting a younger playmate. "What's the big idea?" demanded Victoria—in more regal language of course.

"I just wanted to show him I'm the Prince of Wales," explained the future Edward VII. Victoria yanked him across her knees (that's the lady's story!) and gave him a fanning, pointing out grimly, "I guess I'd better show you I'm Queen of England."

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—For years, in defiance of logic and for no obvious reason at all, I have had the feeling that Pennsylvania station, which is one of this city's two big depots, has a great deal more authenticity and much more the appearance of a railroad station than Grand Central Terminal, which is its uptown twin.

This is the kind of thing about which anyone whose mind is not warped doesn't think twice. There are items of far greater import to be dealt with; there are budgets to be balanced, cosmos to be straightened out. But I think about it, and there, I guess, you are.

There is a coldness and gloominess in Penn station that is a part of this authenticity; it is the kind of station which, when you enter it, gives you the feeling that you are about to board the Blue Train or the Istanbul Express—even though you may be progressing only to South Tenafly, N. J.

It does not have the genuine steam-cloud-and-whistling-whistle splendor of, say, Paris' Gare St. Lazare or Gare du Nord, but it looks and acts like a railroad station. Perhaps it is because it seems hoary with age, in sharp contrast to the spit-and-polish appearance of Grand Central.

Anyway—my instincts have not played me false. Penn Station remains a railroad station. Grand Central, on the other hand, has become a strange and frightening thing, in recent weeks.

SOME ONE HIGH UP in the scheme of things at Grand Central evidently paused between the 13th and 14th holes at his country club one late summer afternoon and said, "You know, Joe, what we need at the terminal is a little something to brighten it up, make it more livable—some music, or something like that. Let's see, I lie four here and shooting five..."

The upshot has been that now Grand Central walls all day long with syrupy music and clatters all day long with commercial announcements. A loud-speaker system, surely the devil's most malicious invention, has been installed.

As you trot wearily for the 5:13 to Tuckahoe, you are depressed by the noise of a Strauss waltz fighting for its head over the customary babble of train-station noises, or irritated beyond words by the sinister voice of some lost soul telling you what kind of razor blade to use.

I doubt if the high-up-in-the-scheme person foresaw the effect all this would have on the populace of New York. On the air and in the papers and magazines, New-Yorkers are being exceptionally bitter about it all.

The New Yorker, for instance, devoted one of its editorials, to use the term loosely, to blasting the idea, and other writers and columnists have taken up the cry. I am one. I think it is dreadful.

ONE OF THE GREAT AND FEW PLEASURES of listening to the radio is that you can shut it off at will. I often like to muse happily on all the unanswered questions put to me by radio announcers that now are wandering sadly around in purgatory, unable to find peace, like The Scoundrel, because there is no one to mourn for them.

"Would you like to know how you can save $14.75?" the announcer will snap at me, clacking his store teeth imperiously. Snap! And there is the question, floating around in space, looking for an answer. Not from me.

The devil with it. Let it float. It is true I would like to know how to save $14.75, but not at the expense of my integrity.

In the midst of the furore, and it is a furore, the fur-lined Mr. Lucius Beebe, King of the after-shave endorser and the aging hero of the Yale campus, has come up with an entirely irrelevant complaint. Lucius has been describing Grand Central bitterly as "the world's most incompetently designed terminal for arrival or departure by taxi."

"It is, in a word, not a continental terminal but a commuter's station," says Lucius Lucius, who always seems to be getting on a train for Tucson or Timbuctu.

M. Beebe weeps, too, for the "idiotic fixed charges" now paid to porters in Grand Central. "A million or so travelers a day who would ordinarily be good for two bits or four for the porter carry their own luggage rather than be told what to pay the railroad," he meditates.

Well, all in all, this is a rough time of things for Grand Central Terminal, and that is just about what you will get when you come here for that semi-annual visit. Violins will play boogie-woogie versions of Rachmaninoff's Second, for piano, and unctuous voices will advise you to change your underwear twice daily and make sure it is a certain brand. A rough, rough time.

300-Plus Attend Elks Dinner Honoring Past Rulers, Candidates

More than 300 persons attended Tuesday night's special meeting of Circleville Elks lodge.

The meeting was held for a triple purpose: (a) to induct 16 new members, (b) pay special honor to past exalted rulers and (c) play host to a visiting Nelsonville lodge delegation.

Starting with a dinner meeting at about 7 p. m., the local lodge served a full banquet to the 300-odd persons who attended. Directed and prepared by Jimmy Carpenter and his crew, the dinner was one of the largest ever served here.

Initiation of the 16 new members was directed by past exalted rulers of the order.

Judge William Radcliff took the chair as exalted ruler, replacing Dr. A. D. Blackburn. Other past exalted rulers taking part in the ritual were Melvin Yates, leading knight; Joe Adkins Jr., loyal knight; Warren Baker, secretary; N. E. Reichelderfer, tyler; Paul Betz, esquire; Barton Deming, chaplain; Leland Pontious, inner guard; and Clydus Fausnaugh, lecturing knight.

REGULAR current officers included Dr. Blackburn, exalted ruler; Edwin Plum, leading knight; Dr. David Goldschmidt, loyal knight; Robert Shadley, lecturing knight; Pontious, secretary; Judge George Young, tyler; George Fishpaw, esquire; Roy Marshall, chaplain; and Karl Drum, inner guard.

Other living past exalted rulers of the local lodge who were up for honor during the meeting were: Dr. A. W. Holman, Meeker Terwilliger, Charles H. May, Orrin Gessley, Dr. H. D. Jackson, I. Lutz May, Max Seyfert Jr., A. J. Lyle, H. L. Bartholomew, Ferd Pickens, Ray Davis, J. B. Work, Paul D. Miller, Andrew Thomas, Tom Renick, Leslie May and Don Henkle.

Also honored was the Nelsonville lodge exalted ruler, Earl Worthington. About 30 men of his lodge attended the local ceremony.

New members initiated during the evening were Earl C. Baker, Pearl H. Baker, Harry E. Briner, Earl Fullen, Norman D. Godden, William B. Heffner, James Hooks, Franklin M. Kibler, Charles Rose, Harry J. Smith, C. Howard Smith, Carl Steinhauser, Paul S. Thompson, Raymond W. Turner, Russell D. Waell and Charles G. Will.

City Building Repairs Urged By Mayor Miller

A suggestion that the front of City Hall be perma-stoned was made to Circleville city council by Mayor Thurman I. Miller Tuesday evening.

He said he had talked to several councilmen recently concerning the need pointing up and painting the exterior of the boxy brick building. He added that perma-stoning probably would be more effective, have more eye-appeal.

The mayor reminded council of an inspection conducted recently by an official from the state department of buildings and factories. The inspector recommended that the present gas heating unit in City Hall basement be junked and a new one installed.

The mayor said the inspector also commented on the incongruity of a wooden ladder being employed for the lower section of the fire escape. He recommended, strongly, that a metal ladder be substituted.

COUNCILMAN Ray Anderson moved that bids for a new gas heating unit for the jail be advertised. Asked President of Council Ben Gordon:

"Do you want to include the ladder in that motion?"

Anderson shrugged. "I don't know how you'd get the window open to use the fire escape, anyway," he commented.

The motion to advertise for bids for the heating unit was carried unanimously.

Council also instructed Safety Director C. O. Leist to find out the cost of replacing defective wiring in City Hall.

Brungs Signs Up For 3rd Hitch

Donald Brungs of Circleville had enlisted for his third hitch in the U. S. armed forces.

Brungs first served with the U. S. Army in the Pacific for a 22-month tour, later enlisting for an 18-month tour of England, Germany and France.

The latest enlistment was with the U. S. Air Force. He is stationed in San Antonio, Texas. His address is: Pfc. Donald E. Brungs, 3715th Training Sqn., LAAF Base, San Antonio, Texas.

DAIRY FARMERS ARE GOOD CREDIT RISKS

Any banker will tell you that farmers who milk cows are real assets to the banker and to the business men in town. Instead of borrowers who must be cared for on a rather shaky security, they become depositors with healthy bank accounts.

When they do borrow, it is for the purpose of making farm improvements and then their available assets and security are gilt edged.

Marketing the milk thru a co-operative dairy plant increases the assurance to the farmer of steady dependable returns and of top money for his milk at all times.

Businessmen Singing At Their Work

Kiwansians Here Prep For Minstrel

There may be some strange sounds coming out of many Circleville business houses the next ten days.

Members of Circleville Kiwanis Club are practicing for their minstrel show scheduled for presentation in the high school auditorium Feb. 23 and 24.

Bulk of time the last two Monday evening meetings in Pickaway Country Club has been devoted to rehearsals — Truman Eberle, high school music master, directing the chorus and Mrs. Audrey Batterson, school dramatics instructor, handling and men.

The affair will involve about 40 persons—all local talent—and will be given to stock up the club's child welfare fund.

IN ADDITION to the Monday evening practice sessions, rehearsals are scheduled for Wednesday evening and Sunday afternoon. Next week, the club probably will be holding nightly workouts.

Eberle is making singers out of dignified businessmen who heretofore claimed they "couldn't carry a tune in a basket."

The music director said that the following situations are entirely possible:

G. Guy Campbell, silver-haired local printer, may be caught humming strains of Old Black and white amid the whoosh-whoosh, clang-clang of his printing presses. . . deep basso profundo voice.

Joe Burns, fancier of fine china and tinkering with watches may at any minute break out in a chorus of "Dinah" while he peers through his jeweler's eyeglass. The Burns voice is high tenor.

C. Ray Barnhart Jr., bank cashier, should be appreciated, not criticized, if, when handing out cash for a loan, he intones terms of the transaction in a rollicking baritone.

And Ben Gordon, dignified ex-mayor, president of city council and dealer in auto parts, can very well be expected to bellow out the melody of the "Levee Song" as he hands a customer's spare part for the family flivver.

But Eberle reported following the last rehearsal that "these Circleville city fathers Tuesday remembered the forgotten man—and raised his pay.

Last December the local legislators gave a 10 percent blanket pay hike to all non-elected city employees. All that is, but one, City Engineer Harry G. Griner.

The oversight was corrected Tuesday when the solons passed an ordinance raising the engi-

Report, New Mexico

"After five years of suffering, I discovered IMDRIN. The first day pain was relieved. Now I walk without a cane and use my feet for sleeping instead of crutches. I feel better than I did years ago."

Mrs. W. H. C. Cleveland, W. Va.

"IMDRIN is worth hundreds of dollars to me. When I used to move my arm, it stabbed me like a knife. I tried many remedies, but only IMDRIN has brought wonderful relief."

Struckman and Metta H. Struckman by deed of Sarah M. Struckman et al, dated August 25, 1924, and recorded in Deed Book Volume 104 at pages 190-191 of the Pickaway County Deed Records.

The United States government is the world's biggest publisher and at a printing and binding cost of over $55 million annually. Among the huge list of publications available upon request are the following: "How to tell the Sex of a Watermelon," "Estimating the Muskrat Population by House Count," "Fleas of North America," "Methods of Catching and Killing Vagrant Cats" and "Tales from Korea." Such expenditures will be discussed at the Jaycee Town Meeting Sunday afternoon in the high school auditorium.

Sokolsky's These Days

In a word, Laubach reaches a priori conclusions, far from the facts, and from those conclusions reasons that if we bankrupt ourselves financing the world, it will be to everyone's benefit. True, we start with only $35 million, but that is one of those foot-in-the-door appropriations, and as Hazlitt points out in his pamphlet, it is impossible even to estimate what Point Four can cost. He says:

"Miss Barbara Ward of Great Britain was merely a little premature when she called for American investment in world stability on an 'heroic scale,' instead of 'homeopathic doses of $15 million.' The history of such schemes enables us to predict with confidence that once the American taxpayers consent to the homeopathic doses, the demands for more heroism will come from their bureaucrats at home."

This is the most dangerous venture yet proposed to the American people. Laubach makes one further point that needs noting: "Philanthropy will be urged to invest more heavily abroad. The churches are getting ready to cooperate in this program through agriculture, literacy (which is my special field), simple literature, and in finding and proposing the finest type of Christian men and women with technical skills."

His suggestion that anyone who opposes Point Four is a Communist is utterly silly. Perhaps he would call Herbert Hoover a Communist or Sen. Robert A. Taft! Perhaps he would say that Earl Browder, when he wrote "Teheran," was not a Communist.

Elks Lodge Votes To Back Scout Troop

Officials of Circleville Elks lodge Tuesday evening announced that the order had voted to sponsor a new Boy Scout troop in Circleville.

Dr. A. D. Blackburn named a special troop committee from the lodge membership to work out details for the proposed troop and supervise its activities.

The group will be headed by Dr. David Goldschmidt. Other committee members will be Ray Turner, Robert Shadley, Andrew Thomas, Bob Pickens and Ervin Leist.

A special meeting place and club room for the troop is to be established in the Elks lodge building, Dr. Blackburn said.

Details for the troop have not yet been worked out.

Laurelville Span Is Reopened

Octave Ammon, district deputy director of Division 6 of the State Highway Department announced Wednesday that the re-flooring of the bridge over Laurel Creek in Laurelville on the Adelphi-Circleville road (State Route 56) had been completed and is now open to traffic.

This bridge was erected by the highway department in 1943 replacing an old covered structure over the stream. At that time it was impossible to secure material for the flooring due to wartime restrictions and salvaged material from the old bridge was used as a temporary measure.

Trotters Ready For Big Tour

Veck To Pit Stars Against Pro '5'

NEW YORK, Feb. 8 — The improbable Harlem Globetrotters, basketball's greatest team, will stump the country in April in a series of games against the ten best college seniors now playing.

This whopping promotion will mark—as some shrewd guessers might suspect—the return of Bill Veck to his beloved role of showman in sport.

Veck relinquished his control of the Cleveland Indians last Fall, for reasons best known to himself and any six-year-old student of finance, and now enters the basketball realm in collaboration with the Globetrotter owner, coach, and psychoanalyst, Abe Saperstein.

Starting in Cleveland on April 3, the tour will run through 16 large cities, with the games to be sponsored by newspapers along the line. All newspapers will donate their portion of the proceeds to charity.

Among the sponsoring papers are The Cleveland News, The Denver Post, The San Francisco Call-Bulletin, The Buffalo Evening News, The Salt Lake City Telegram and The Cincinnati Telegram. Others are still in process of smoothing out details with the ambitious tour promoters.

SELECTION of the college all-star team to oppose the Trotters will be up to Chuck Taylor, longtime observer of the basketball scene and an acknowledged expert at judging talent. Lined up already as coaches are two of the very best: Hank Iya of Oklahoma A and M and Clair Bee of Long Island U. Moose Krause of Notre Dame will help too, on a parttime basis.

Taylor said the ten collegians are likely to be culled from a list such as this: Paul Arizin of Villanova, Kevin O'Shea of Notre Dame, Don Lofgran of San Francisco, Hal Haskell of Hamline, Paul Unruh of Bradley, Pich of Wyoming, Don Rehfeldt of Wisconsin, Bill Erickson of Illinois, Joel Kauffman of NYU, Bob Cousy of Holy Cross, Chuck Share of Bowling Green, John Chuck Cooper of Duquesne, Irwin Dambrot of CCNY, Dick Schmittner of Ohio State and Bill Sharmann of USC.

Cities and dates now on the tour are:

April 3, Cleveland; 4, Indianapolis; 5, Louisville; 6, Kansas City; 7, Salt Lake City; 8, 9, Los Angeles; 10, San Francisco; 11, Denver; 12, Oklahoma City; 13, St. Louis; 14, Cincinnati; 15, Detroit; 16, Boston; 17, Pittsburgh; 18, Philadelphia; 19, Buffalo.

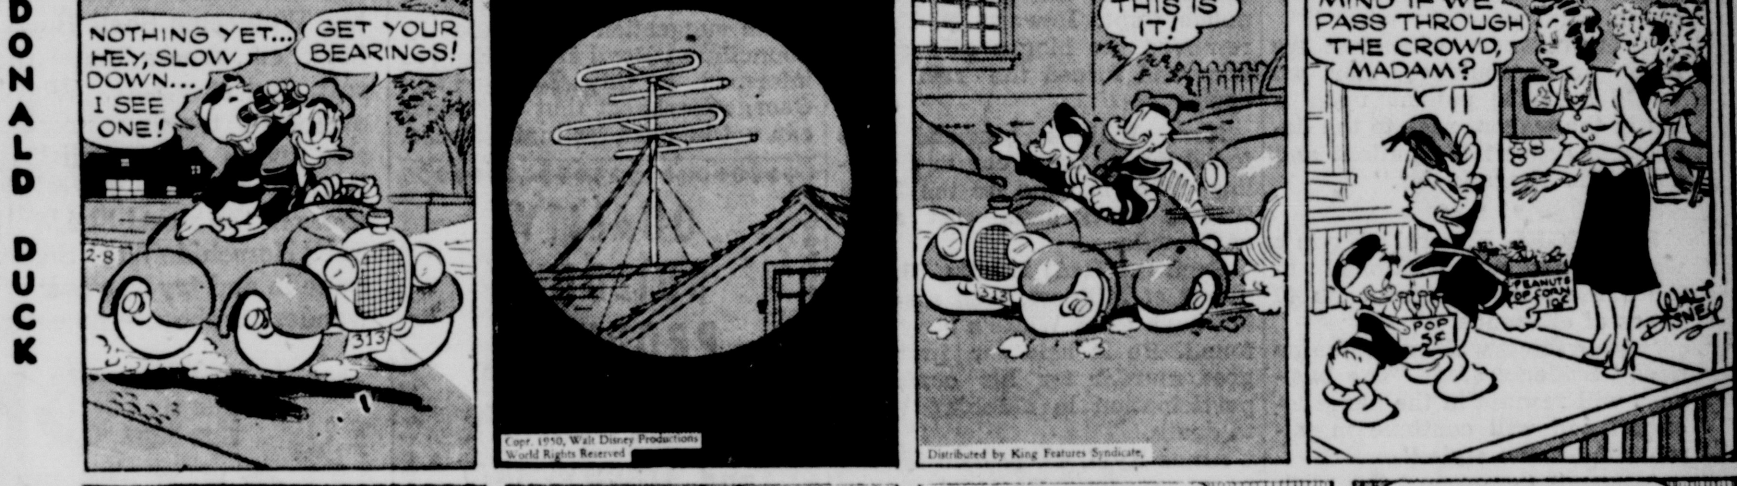

Art Fletcher Is Dead At 65

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 8—One of baseball's great oldtimers, Art Fletcher, shortstop of the New York Giants in the days of John McGraw and Christy Mathewson, died Monday.

Fletcher, who participated in 14 World Series—four with the Giants and ten as baseline coach for the New York Yankees—died of a heart attack at the wheel of his automobile. He was 65.

E. F. Schlegel Resigning As Ashville Funeral Director

Marionite Taking Over Business

40-Odd Years Service Recalled

One of the oldest active Pickaway County morticians has turned over his practice to younger blood.

E. F. Schlegel, founder of Schlegel Funeral Home in Ashville, has turned over his practice to Warren Bastian of Marion.

Schlegel opened his business in Ashville in August, 1904, after having served with C. J. Ware Funeral Home in Chillicothe for several years.

"At that time we had only horse-drawn conveyances," recalls the funeral director, "Very crude."

"For instance, whenever we made an ambulance run we would load the patient upon a cot in the wagon, race to the depot and deposit the patient and cot in the baggage car."

SCHLEGEL Funeral Home was founded and continued in the same site throughout its 40 years of existence.

"Everything will be the same now," Schlegel said. "The business will remain in the same location and will continue in almost the same style."

Although demurring the rank of "oldest" active county funeral director, Schlegel admitted that he was one of the "older" practicing embalmers.

"My embalming license number was A-686," the mortician said. "Bastian here, who has been in the business nearly 10 years, has for a number A-5169."

The aging director added that he had assisted in at least two outstanding tragedies to which most directors do not fall heir.

"I assisted in serving when 1,062 soldiers died in Camp Sherman in October, 1918. I was in charge of the camp morgue at the time."

"Another time, about Easter more than 20 years ago, I was assigned to take care of the 317 victims of the fire which swept the Ohio State Penitentiary."

But one of the prides of the retiring director is that: "I have served five generations while practicing in Ashville."

Bastian, the new director, is married and plans to live in the upper portion of the funeral home.

Murder Victim's Widow Believed To Be Suicide

A coroner's investigation was being conducted in Columbus into the "apparent suicide" of the widow of Theodore B. White, victim of the Ashville "shallow grave" murder last June 4.

Mrs. Stella White, 55, was found dead Monday. She was lying in bed in her second-floor bedroom with a bullet through her heart. Her hand held a revolver.

Dr. Robert A. Evans, Franklin County coroner, said the bullet passed through her body and lodged in the mattress. Upon preliminary examination, Dr. Evans said the death was "apparently suicide."

Mrs. C. F. Malone, a neighbor of Mrs. White's, called police. She said she had not seen the woman since Saturday. Finding the doors of the home locked, police Capt. Howard B. Hinton removed the hinges of a storm door and forced the rear door open.

Mrs. White's husband was found buried last year in a shallow grave in sand on the Little Walnut Creek bank, just south of Ashville.

Cecil B. (Red) Martin, 33, formerly of Millport, was arrested ten days after White's body was found. He is held for first degree murder for his confessed participation in clubbing White to death.

Amos Ryal, 43, is held for the same murder. He told police Martin had hired him to bludgeon White.

Schlegel will move from the funeral home to a new home at 314 East Main street.

"I'll build myself a garage there and catch up with my hobby," chuckled the man.

Schlegel confessed to having a woodworking shop in his home, where he is a cabinet-maker—"for my own use."

Bastian was graduated by Harding high school in Marion and entered the funeral business with two years of apprenticeship before entering the Army in 1941.

While in the Army Bastian served two years in Iran prior to his discharge in 1945. He attended Cleveland College of Mortuary Science in 1946, and later was associated with Hughes Funeral Home in Marion.

Veterans' Aide Explains Pay Plan For Death

"What happens if I die before my insurance dividend number comes up? I've got number 999, you know."

A bit farfetched, perhaps, but Pickaway County Veterans Service Officer James P. Shea reported Wednesday that many inquiries are being made about the payment of the dividends if the insured veteran were to die. "Payment of the dividends will not be made through the regular channels in a death case," Shea said, "but will be turned over to the 'claims service' for payment."

The veterans' officer pointed out that if the insurance was in force when the veteran died, the special dividends will be paid to the beneficiary named in the policy.

If, however, the insurance was permitted to lapse prior to the veterans' death, the dividend will be paid to his estate through the executor or administrator.
